Marywood University School of Architecture is pleased to present SPECULATIONS: Drawing out Possibilities in Architecture, an exhibition that brackets two points in Alessandro Ayuso's career: work done at Virginia Tech's College of Architecture and Design and collaborative work with the G_S_Squad and MAKE Design in New York City.

The exhibit focuses on process in architecture. It was conceived not only as a didactic tool for the inaugural class of Marywood School of Architecture, but also as a way to address larger questions and possibilities of the spatial representation of built environments, digital and analog media, and urban design and planning. The pieces come from work on five unbuilt projects and include sketches, architectural drawings, collages, models, presentation boards, and projections.

Alessandro Ayuso is an adjunct faculty member at Marywood University's new School of Architecture. He is also a partner at MAKE Design in New York City.
